Our Lemons

In warm Southern California, my family earns extra money by growing over 20 lemon trees. I help pick the lemons early in the morning when they are small, green, and two inches long, which gives them the best taste. My father then sells them to local stores as they turn yellow. Down the road, a much larger grove ships fruit worldwide by train.

Since our climate cannot grow my mother's favorite apples, my father buys ones grown in Washington, My mother loves how connected our kitchen is to world-especially when she drinks Chinese tea sweetened with Brazilian sugar and a slice of our own local lemon.
